and a newspaper man. No member of the board of aldermen was on hand. When Clerk Scripture had read the warning and under its first clause it taiked upon the motion, saying that his views coincided with those of Mr. Geilnas and believed in the city's raising enough to pay its bills, but he was of the opinion that the big corporations and large land owners should be required to pay their just portion of the tayes alone with the recover and less taxes along with the poorer and less fortunate ones, who had to shoulder the most of the burden at the present

Mayor Dunn stated that the taxes were being equalized all over the state and that he felt sure that Willimantic would also come to it before enother year. The motion was passed. It was then moved by Mr. Randall that the tax be due and payable June 1st, and it was so voted. Adjournment was then taken. Mayor Dunn voiced the opinion after the meeting that a fourteen mill tax would have been more near the right levy instead of twelve mills to raise the necessary money for mills to raise the necessary money for the current expenses in view of the various matters that the city has in hand for the year.

A Day of Whirling Dust. Who ate not their peck of dirt is Danielson Saturday stayed in doors Danielson Saturday stayed in doors. There was no escaping the penalty if one ventured out. All of the streets of the borough were bad enough, but Main street in particular was a fright. Real dirty dirt swirled in clouds that blinded and choked and made one almost forget resolutions about repeating certain things. The Easter shoppers were showered with dust and the refuse of the street in a way that was discouraging. And many wondered why the street sprinkling season had not opened.

police charged with breaking and entering.

Railroad detectives have been carefully watching the territory between this city and Webster for considerable time in an endeavor to locate the parties that have been breaking seals and entering freight cars. The losses that have resulted are said to amount to many hundreds of dollars. Much of the work has been cleverly and mysteriously executed, placing the officers at a decided disadvantage in their endeavor to locate the guilty parties.

Forest fires were reported form all the surrounding country on Saturday, but none of them were regarded as serious.
